The Journey of Zhejiang University
The Journey of Zhejiang University

After the outbreak of the Anti-Japanese War, Zhejiang University was forced to move out of Hangzhou to Guizhou. Under the guidance of President Zhu Kezhen, a famous meteorologist, geologist and educator, Zhejiang University went through many difficulties and adversities to establish itself as one of the most influential leading universities in China.

During the 1952 readjustment of China’s Tertiary Education System, some departments of Zhejiang University were split up into a number of single-discipline colleges and others were merged into universities outside Zhejiang Province. Still others were combined with Hangzhou University or Zhejiang Provincial College of Medicine to found new colleges.

Through about fifty years’ development, the four universities derived from the same origin, — namely Zhejiang University, Hangzhou University, Zhejiang Agricultural University and Zhejiang Medical University, — all attain considerable achievements.

With the approval of the State Council, on 15th September, 1998, Zhejiang University, Hangzhou University, Zhejiang Agricultural University and Zhejiang Medical University reunited into a new Zhejiang University. The university is now under the direct administration of China’s Ministry of Education with joint support from both the Ministry of Education and Zhejiang Provincial Government.

● Boundary Tablet of Qiushi Academy

The boundary Tablet of Qiushi Academy was the boundary mark of Qiushi Academy and formally lay at the original site of Qiushi Academy at Puchang Lane (now Daxue Road). In 1992, it was moved to Yuquan Campus and now stands on the right side inside the school gate in front of the No.11 Teaching Building.

● Xianhu Road Stone

The Xianhu Road Monument, established in 1997 and 2010, commemorates the University of Zhejiang's campus history. In December 2010, "Walking the Xianhu Road---Zhejiang University's Qiushi Theme Education Tour" was awarded the excellent campus cultural building achievement award. "Walking the Xianhu Road---Qiushi Theme Education Tour" is an influential campus cultural activity.
