Dear President Wu,

On behalf of the University of Sydney, I'd like to offer warm congratulations to Zhejiang University as you celebrate your 125th anniversary. Zhejiang is internationally recognised as one of China's leading universities and it's a credit to you that you've achieved great success with your determined efforts to 'seek truth and pursue innovation'. I'm delighted that Sydney can count Zhejiang as one of our closest international partners.

I understand that the two universities signed a Partnership Agreement in 2018, and our seed funding has supported some important new joint research projects, particularly in Engineering, Computer Science, and Medical and Health Sciences. In November 2021 we embarked on an important new project, opening a joint laboratory on sustainable environment in pursuit of the UN's Sustainable Development Goals.

As well as the formal strategic partnership, we have developed strong friendships – and we were particularly touched when Zhejiang donated 2000 medical masks to Sydney at the start of the COVID pandemic.

We offer you our best wishes for your anniversary celebrations and are sure they'll be very successful.

Yours sincerely,

Mark Scott
